

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF AN INSTRUCTIONAL DESIGN SPECIALIST

EVERY DAY IS DIFFERENT

Each day as an Instructional Design Specialist is different. Depending on the project stage, you could be researching, outlining, observing a training, or creating and editing learning content. You'll have opportunities to be innovative each and every day! During the development of training products, you'll be responsible for creating interactive learning experiences and materials that meet the unique needs of our partners.

OPPORTUNITIES

Some days, you'll spend time working closely with team members, while other days, you'll create videos, visual aids, and interactive learning components independently. You'll have many opportunities to learn and grow your skills, including meeting the needs of adult learners and becoming proficient in using creative apps and computer programs.

CONNECTION

Although you'll spend the majority of time working independently, there are many opportunities to collaborate with other members of the Great Kids® family. You might connect with your team during a Think Tank meeting, partner with trainers to discuss training feedback, attend a one-on-one check-in with your manager, and participate in an all-staff meeting. You'll be surrounded by a team of individuals who will support you in building on your strengths and remind you of the important work you're doing for families and children.
